The Degree

The professional track was designed specifically for lawyers educated outside the U.S. who want to earn an internationally renowned Berkeley Law LL.M. degree but choose to complete their studies over two consecutive summer sessions, rather than a full standard academic year. Students participate exclusively with other LL.M. students in smaller classes and professional development activities that are tailored specifically for the LL.M. professional track program. The professional track's format lends itself to creating close bonds with fellow students who become an invaluable global professional network.

The Format

Students in our Professional Track take courses at Berkeley Law, May through August, over two consecutive summers. Each summer, students can choose to begin in either May (for a 13 week term) or June (for a 10 week term). Courses are intensive, which means they are taught over fewer weeks with more class time each week. Most courses are about 3 weeks in duration, followed immediately by a final exam. Because of the intensive format, students complete 1-2 courses every 3 weeks.

The Coursework

Students complete mandatory courses in Fundamentals of U.S. Law and Legal Research and Writing, and then may customize their studies by choosing from a curated subset of Berkeley Law's most popular courses. Students may focus their studies to earn a Certificate of Specialization and/or to meet the requirements to become eligible to register for the California Bar Examination.

"Wonderful classmates, excellent professors and perfect weather."
